

Jane Glaister OBE

1964 -1971.

Jane Glaister (formerly Whitfield) is a nationally recognised expert in the creative and cultural industries, specialising in cultural heritage.

After leaving Kelvin, Jane took a BA in English and History before joining Voluntary Service Overseas (VSO) in Nigeria. She went on undertake further study in anthropology before embarking on her career in culture.

She currently runs her own business advising governments and lecturing, nationally and internationally, on cultural policy and leadership.

She has worked in the culture and leisure industry for 30 years and was, until recently, Strategic Director of Culture, Tourism and Sport with the City of Bradford.

Jane was elected president of the UK Museums Association (2002 – 2004) and was awarded an OBE in 2005.